One of our Success stories

Chaya Tanaji Dukre aged 22 was pregnant. However she was not aware of the important dos and donts during pregnancy. Her family is poor. Their village has no proper road or and transportation facility to access proper medical care. Therefore a healthy and normal delivery was ruled out.

Our local female volunteer provided guidance to Chaya and her family regarding the care to be taken during the pregnancy and advised her on her diet so that the health of mother and child is not compromised. At the time of the delivery MGVS helped transport Chaya to the MGVS Health Center. Chaya had a normal and healthy delivery. We also provided food and medicine and arranged to transport her and the child back home after the delivery.

After witnessing this case convincing other pregnant women to go in for a safer institutional delivery rather than home delivery became easier.

What does General Fund mean?

In order to be sustainable, we need to build a strong organisation. Given the erratic nature of funding, developing a general fund is one way that NGOs can do this. When you donate to the general fund, it helps us design long-term programmes without worrying about programme support from aid agencies and to meet organisational costs that no one else is willing to bear.

Essentially general fund donations are not earmarked for a specific purpose, and the NGO is thus free to use them as required [e.g., to meet fundraising costs, to conduct a training programme to upgrade skills of its own staff, or to launch a new project, etc.]

Declaration:

We hereby undertake that all funds received from GiveIndia have been used solely for the purposes of relief of poor. The aforesaid Impact Report is true to the best of our knowledge and belief.

We further undertake that the expenses mentioned above have been met exclusively through our own unrestricted funding. We will not seek reimbursement for these expenses from any other source whatsoever. These expenses have also not been submitted to GiveIndia in the past in any form.
