islands, which focuses on healthcare and medical services for the poor communities, especially, women, children and elderly. The services are provided from a base hospital – Swarnalata Sabuj Seva Sadan, located in the remote village of Nandakumarpur in the Sunderbans. The core operational area in Sunderbans islands have no modern amenities like electricity, proper roads, public transportation, and often people have to cross several rivers to reach the mainland. Government health service points are almost absent in all these islands and people reside here do not have access to these. They are largely dependent on unregistered quack doctors and faith healers.

Malnutrition among women and children, lack of routine immunization in children and pregnant women, water and fly borne diseases, infections, neurotic disorders, accidents are common and widespread in the region, and generally left untreated due to inaccessibility to health services. Pregnant women do not receive the proper ante-natal and post-natal care, and often undergo deliveries at home without medical supervision. Infant and maternal mortality rates are marginally high, but the risk of unscreened pregnancy in a land of marginal facilities is enormous.

‘Sabuj Sangha’ focuses on promotion of safe institutional delivery for the pregnant women in the Sunderbans islands. A team of trained health professionals provide doorstep services to the women, including an optimum natal care package and risk screening.
