Most Government school children have no access to reading books other than text books. With a view to inculcating reading habit among them, BREAD Society is establishing Children's Libraries in government high schools. It has set up 663 libraries in the past 6 years opening up a whole new world for over 3 lakh children every year. All this while being a 100% volunteer driven organisation with just 1% of the programme outlay on operational overheads.

An Expert Committee selects books of interest to 9- 14-year age group children. BREAD Children's Library consists of 650 books and a bookcase with four lockable hanging glass doors for safe custody of books. Additional books are given to existing libraries on a rotation basis. Please feel free to reach out to heads of any of the schools for an independent feedback at the link below:
